Springfield, Ill., April 24.—Important decisions by the supreme court yesterday were:

Ordinances that require the closing of certain classes of business places, such as barber shops, on Sunday held invalid.

Four million dollar assessment against properties of the Chicago Tunnel company upheld in a decision that holds that a prediction by a member of the board of review carries on legal weight.

Inheritance tax declared no tax upon property, but a condition which the state imposes upon the privilege of succeeding to the ownership of property by descent or will in a decision against the Northern Trust company in its case against Buck and Rayner, a corporation, for $8,010, which the trust company had paid as an inheritance tax.

Cities held not liable to damages sustained by corporations by the elevation of railroad tracks ordered by the city in a decision against the Otis Elevator company and in favor of the City of Chicago.

Opinion holding workmen's compensation act of 1911 constitutional reaffirmed.

The garage building ordinance, which prohibits the construction of a garage within 200 feet of a church or 100 feet of a residential street, held valid.

Civil service employees denied right to demand pay for overtime.

Electric railways held governable by the same laws as apply to the operation of steam railroads.
